Why participate? To be recognized for the innovative work occurring in your hospital every day!

The Greater Cincinnati Health Council (GCHC) and American Society for Quality are pleased to present to our health provider members the fifth annual Innovative Solutions Award. This award recognizes the most innovative process improvement, patient care initiative or creative change project. For 2010, the Health Council has aligned its annual Innovative Solutions Award with the American Society for Quality (ASQ). ASQ is the world's leading membership organization devoted to quality, including health care. ASQ members represent communities that seeks quality concepts, technology and tools to improve themselves and the world.

In addition, the Health Council has also created a new award category specifically for Health Council affiliate members. Health Council affiliate members include long-term care facilities, home health agencies, physician groups and other non-hospital health care providers in Greater Cincinnati.

Visit the Health Council's website at www.gchc.org for more information about the above criteria.

Submission Process:

- Go to www.gchc.org to download the application (to access, click the Solutions Award link on the Health Council's home page).
- From among the applications, your CEO/Senior Site Administrator will choose one application to submit to the Health Council by January 22, 2010 on behalf of your organization.

Applications may be published on the Health Council's website. For this reason, please note when confidential information is contained within your entry.

Evaluation Criteria:

- Identify project selection, purpose and improvement opportunities
- Describe methods for developing the project's solution and integrating full team member involvement
- Results and goal attainment
